Q2790396 Read the following passage and answer the questions given below:

Karnataka is bestowed with seven critical river systems that are lifelines to the state—Godavari, Krishna, Cauvery, North Pennar, South Pennar, Palar and all the west flowing rivers. Although many rivers flow to the west and join the Arabian Sea, they account for a meagre 12.73% of the water that drain in the state. The majority, a whopping 87.27% of the drainage area, is a result of the six mighty east-flowing rivers. Why this stark imbalance, you wonder? There is a bit of geological history to this, and the story starts with the history of the Western Ghats, where most of Karnataka's rivers originate

Over 180 million years ago (mya), all the present-day land mass, the seven major continents as we know them, was merged into a supercontinent called the Gondwana land. Thanks to an extraordinary geological event, the massive landmass broke up into several pieces and one of them, the Peninsular Indian plate, drifted northwards for about 100 million years. About 45 million years ago, it eventually hit the Asian plate resulting in the formation of the Himalayan mountain range.

During this arduous journey, the drifting Peninsular Indian plate passed through the present-day Reunion Islands, which had a volcanic centre in the Earth's lithosphere spread over 200-300 km. The volcano, which erupted throwing out basaltic magma, resulted in the uplift of what is now the Western Ghats and tilted the Indian plate in the easterly direction. Thus, the Western Ghats are not actual 'mountains' but faulted edge of a raised plateau.

By the time the Peninsular Indian plate ended its northward drift and collided with the Asian mainland (between 45 million years and 65 million years), the Western Ghats was already there with permanently east the drainage patterns. Hence, although most rivers in Karnataka originate in the Western Ghats, they eventually drain into the Bay of Bengal.

Q2791474 Read the following passage and answer the questions based on the information provided in the passage.

Education planning should aim at meeting the educational needs of the entire population of all age groups. While the traditional structure of education as a three-layer hierarchy from the primary stage to the university represents the core, we shouldn't overlook the periphery which is equally important under modern conditions. Workers need to rewind or renew their enthusiasm or strike out in a new direction or improve their skills as much as any university professor. The retired and the aged have their needs as well. Educational planning, in their words, should take care of everyone's needs. Our structure of education has been built up on the assumption that there is a terminal point to education. This basic defect has become all the more harmful, today. A UNESCO report entitled "Learning to be" prepared by Edgar Faure and others in 1973 asserts that the education of children must prepare the future adults for various forms of self- learning. A viable education system of the future should consist of modules with different kinds of functions serving a diversity of constituents. And period of study shouldn't be the basis for credentials. Performance should be the basis for credentials. The writing is already on the wall.
