Q2790402 Read the following passage and answer the questions given below:

"Girls are the world's most wasted gift. They are precious human beings with enormous potential, but across the world, they are generally the last to have their basic needs met and first to have their basic rights denied." It is no different in India.

In India females are victimized in various fields like health, education and jobs. The girls carry the burden of dowry on their head, and they have to leave their parents' home after marriage. Besides, in order to safeguard their old age parents, prefer to have male children. Many female babies are aborted, abandoned, deliberately neglected and underfed simply as they are girls.

But now there is a great change in this direction. The government has started a scheme for the protection of girl child. The scheme is called 'Ladli', in which an amount is set aside at the time of the birth of a girl child which she gets when she completes eighteen years of age. This amount is then used for the education or the marriage of the child. Similarly, there is another scheme called 'Jaccha Baccha scheme'. Under this scheme, the state governments take care of the birth of the child and all expenditure related to medical assistance for the upbringing of the child. In some states where girl child ratio is very low, the government has taken out many schemes to promote education of girls.

Today, women enjoy voting rights, right to inheritance and property. Several laws have been passed since independence to promote the interests of women. These laws relate to marriage, inheritance of property, divorce, dowry, etc. In 1976, the Equal Remuneration Act was passed to provide for equal remuneration to men and women for similar work.

However, in spite of these provisions, we find a lot of discrimination against women. In most Indian families even today, a girl child is least welcome although in India women were respected from the early ages. Even though there are growing instances of girls excelling in all fields, tradition, custom, and social practices place greater value on sons than on daughters.

Q2790406 According to the passage, all of the following statements are FALSE Except:

Q2791468 Read the following passage and answer the questions based on the information provided in the passage.

Driving etiquette is a civilized driving behaviour comprising observance of rules and propriety. Certain statutory obligations have to be observed. While driving a vehicle, it is absolutely essential that all documents connected with ownership of the vehicles, driving license, pollution-free certificate in original, etc. are kept in the car. They have to be produced on demand by the competent authority. When the person driving a vehicle is still a learner, the broad L should be prominently displayed.

Parking vehicles on the side of the road is a common feature because of paucity of space. Technically, this is illegal as per the Indian Motor Vehicle Act, but the rule is not enforced strictly. To caution a pedestrian or a slow-moving vehicle in front of us, sounding the horn is essential. We are bound to do it legally as well, but we should not honk unnecessarily, creating sound pollution.

Basic human dignity is more important than strict observance of rules. At crossroads, those who come from our right path always have precedence. We should give hand signals for those who follow us, particularly when we slow down, take sudden turn or overtake a vehicle. Never take a vehicle from wrong side even if there is space. When another driver makes a mistake try to correct him if time permits, instead of abusing him or threatening him with dire consequences.
