Passage questions (4-8)

Read the passage and answer the questions that follow:

"Here I am, starting to waste another morning, mooning," said Jane to herself sharply. "I must do some work." By work she meant her doctorate thesis on Donne. She still believed that if she got out all her note-books and editions and really sat down to the job she could force herself back into her lost enthusiasm for the subject. But before she did so she turned over a newspaper which was lying on the table and glanced at a picture on the back page.

The moment she saw the picture, she remembered her dream; not only the dream but the time after she had crept out of bed and sat waiting for the morning, afraid to put on the light for fear Mark should wake up and fuss, yet feeling offended by the sound of his regular breathing. He was an excellent sleeper.

4) Why did Jane wait for the morning?

- A) She wanted to do some housework.
- B) She was afraid to put on the light.
- C) She wanted to write her thesis.
- D) She had a nightmare.

Passage Questions (38 – 42)

Read the following passage and answer the questions given below:

Learning is driven by what teachers and pupils do in classrooms. Teachers have to manage complicated and demanding situations, channelling the personal, emotional, and social pressures of a group of 30 or more youngsters in order to help them learn immediately and become better learners in the future. Standards can be raised only if teachers can tackle this task effectively. In terms of systems engineering, present policies in the U.S. and in many other countries seem to treat the classroom as a black box. Certain inputs from the outside -- pupils, teachers, other resources, management rules and requirements, parental anxieties, standards, tests with high stakes, and so on -- are fed into the box. Some outputs are supposed to follow: pupils who are more knowledgeable and competent, better test results, teachers who are reasonably satisfied, and so on

38) The 'black box' mentioned in the passage symbolises

- A) pressures created by policies
- B) what happens in the classroom
- C) mental processes of the teacher
- D) mental processes of the student

39) Which of the following statements finds support in the passage?

- A) Teachers never face challenges in a classroom that are complicated.
- B) Raising the standards of education is the responsibility of the government.
- C) Many countries seem to treat the classroom as a black box.
- D) Learning is driven by what pupils achieve and do in the classrooms.
