The voyage from San Francisco took eight days, and despite the overcrowding aboard the Umatilla, the time passed quickly. Jack kept a close eye on Shepard and was pleased to see that the man lost none of his resolve during the journey.

Passage questions (34-38)

Read the following passage and answer the questions below:

Leadership seems to have existed almost forever. Even beehives have their queens and a rather well-established hierarchy. Dominant roles are held both by males in patriarchal societies and women in matriarchal ones, although the latter have been more common. The very nature of the concept of leadership, is inequality in function, where one entity (group or individual) follows another. It is immaterial the degree of guidance in determining whether a leadership situation exists. Naturally, there may be more complicated situations where roles are reversed, as in pure democracies. For example, a city council following the advice of a committee. The most fundamental form of leadership is between two persons, where one may do so little as guide the other. That guidance, even suggestive in form, demarcates an inequality between the two, one following the other, even if it is meant taking advice. From this simple level, that mere advice can escalate to pure dominance. At still a more intense level, one can find an autocratic leader.
