The rose that smiles today,

Though beautiful and gay

Will shortly fade away

The mountains looming high

That seem to kiss the sky,

Will some day crumbled lie.

The rolling oceans wide,

One thinks will e'er abide

Will once be emptied, dried.

The earth so firm and vast,

Today that rolls so fast,

Will cease to be at last.

Each star now shining bright;

That meets thy wondering sight,

Will one day lose its light.
